»Fallingwater«

with Lynda S. Waggoner

Director of Fallingwater, Pennsylvania, USA

Tuesday, May 17th, 2016 | 7:00 PM

Wallraf Richartz Museum | Stiftersaal | Obermarspforten 40 | 50667 Köln

Who hasn't heard of it: The house "Fallingwater" by Frank Lloyd Wright, built from 1936 through 1939. Millions of visitors have pilgrimaged there – to this house that uniquely combines architecture with nature. Built into the hillside and over a waterfall, it reflects the cascade of the water, becoming an icon of modern architecture. The importance of Frank Lloyd Wright in the development of modern architecture, and especially in American architecture is immense. He is THE American architect and Fallingwater is the most representative building in his expansive oeuvre. Built for the Kaufmann family, Fallingwater has been a house museum since 1964.

We are very happy to welcome Lynda S. Waggoner to present us in Cologne the Iconic house "Fallingwater" and its architect Frank Lloyd Wright. Ms Waggoner is Director of Fallingwater, Vice President of the Western Pennsylvania Conservancy and on the board of the Frank Lloyd Wright Building Conservancy as well as the Iconic Houses Network

The UAA Ungers Archiv für Architekturwissenschaft is a member of Iconic Houses, an international network connecting architecturally important private houses of the 20th century that are open to the public. After Philip Johnson's "Glasshouse" and Mies van der Rohe's "Villa Tugendhat" it is the third cooperation with UAA Ungers Archiv für Architekturwissenschaft in which we present American architects and their work with the example of an iconic house.

After the lecture we will show the movie „Fallingwater, Frank Lloyd Wright's Masterwork" by Kenneth Love.

Admission is free of charge.
The lecture and movie will be in English.

Please keep in mind that the number of seats is limited!
